

Evolution: Pretend-Science For The Willfully Ignorant

In the beginning Nothing created the heaven and the earth. And the Nothing found something and that something inexplicably exploded into lots of other somethings. And those lots of somethings arranged themselves into the glorious, exceedingly complex, orderly universe we see around us. We have yet to even scratch the surface regarding our understanding of the workings of the living creatures that somehow came from that supposed original explosion. We continually borrow ideas for our own inventions from the designs we see in nature and in the universe around us. Yet we insist there was no Grand Designer. We now call this kind of thinking “rational” and we call the people who tell us this story “scientists” and we call their story “evolution”. And they love us for it. It makes them so happy to have people agree with them that there was no Grand Designer and that there is no God. Does it make YOU happy to pretend that there is no Grand Designer, no God of creation, no God for you to be accountable to for your every thought, word and deed?

“Neither is there any creature that is not manifest in his sight: but all things are naked and opened unto the eyes of him with whom we have to do.” - Hebrews 4:13
