18 Protestants Being Burned Alive By The Catholic Church In 1528

What did these people do to justify being burned alive? Well, some of them may have refused to go to [the Catholic] church. Others may have refused to believe that the Catholic communion wafer is really God in the form of a cracker. Some denied that the popes were infallible. Others had the nerve to say that the authority of the Bible is above the authority of the church of Rome. A few may have merely possessed a copy of the Bible in their native language. All had one thing in common - they all loved the living and true God more than their own lives and refused to partake of the idolatrous religion of Rome.
